Dear The Federal Communications Commission,

I do not want to pay more for my telephone service! I urge you to reject a flat fee proposal that would change how contributions are made to the Universal Service Fund. I am concerned that this proposal could make my current service unaffordable.

Under the flat fee proposal you are considering, people who make few long distance calls would pay the same as people or businesses that make many calls. In other words, low-volume and primarily residential customers would bear the same universal service fund burden as a high-volume residential or business customers. This is unfair!

I use my wireless phone for safety, security and convenience. I don't want to lose these benefits so that big businesses can pay less than their fair share. I urge you to reject the proposal to move the USF collection system to a flat-fee.

Keep the USF Fair!

On an additional note:

...it would seem that we are considering opting from a viable source of "those whom can provide the adequate funds but prefer not to" instead to "everyone (of which some may not be as able to produce the same monetary gain) and by this measure increase the probability of failure of the program by virtue of accounts receivable". I can understand the concept of improving options in order to increase business, but expecting the general public to equalaterally cover the costs will more likely impair a portion of them to actaually maintain these elemantal services due to increased cost and therefor become a "liability" instead!

Sincerely,

M Speedy
